THE FIRST 100 YEARS

By Mack Sennett ✓

MAY 28 1924 ✓

Harry is a newlywed and when the little apartment is comfortably fixed up their joy is turned to grief when the cook makes a sudden departure. The newly weds are favored by a visit of an old-time rival (Harry's) and he is invited to become a week-end guest. Meanwhile, Harry secures a new cook from an employment agency and this new cook, a rather good looking young woman, causes trepidation in the heart of Mrs. Newlywed which is further augmented by insinuations from Roland regarding the other women in Harry's life. Many little dramatic incidents occur during the week-end during which time a violent thunder storm adds some terror to the situations, but a happy ending comes when the new cook divulges her identity as a family sleuth and arrests Roland -- the man wanted in many states for many crimes.
